[redacted] • INVESTOR CALL SUMMARY • POST-CALL

[redacted] Angels

Call held 19 October 2026

He asked for this meeting himself, asked for the deck before it ended, and offered two routes onward: a referral into the angel group and introductions into strategic investors overseas. No cheque for this round was discussed.

PROBABILITY OF CLOSE

Moderate, and process-gated

He asked for materials and committed to follow-up questions, which is real forward motion. But he cannot act alone, and he said so: the group meets twice a month, brings a company back two weeks later, and runs diligence in between.

Treat the referral, not the cheque, as this meeting's product, and settle the freight-volume figure before anything goes to him.

THE MEETING

What happened on the call

Company	[redacted]: an AI software company whose agents execute freight operations.
Investor	A member-led angel network, not a fund.
Attendees	[redacted]; the CEO and a second speaker from the company.
Stage	Bridge. [redacted], behind [redacted] already in.
Sentiment	Engaged. Asked for the deck unprompted; volunteered his referral routes.
Referral offered	Yes: the angel group, plus overseas investors and distributors.

WHAT LANDED

Top points of interest

- The agent margin delta. Margin per load rose from [redacted] with staff to [redacted] once agents ran part of the freight. He engaged with this most.
- Software revenue on an existing customer. One customer now pays for both the transport management system and the agents, roughly doubling revenue from a single account.
- Three products, independently saleable. Brokerage, agents and a cloud TMS, any one or any combination. This drew his only explicit agreement: that covering all three is where the strength sits.

WHAT IS IN THE WAY

Reservations and gating factors

- He cannot act alone. Two meetings a month, a second meeting and diligence two weeks after the first, and members decide independently. No one has yet asked him to sponsor the company into a slot.
- Competition was the one thing he pressed twice. Large brokerages on one side, funded agent startups on the other. The CEO named the agent startups and argued the TMS is what none of them carry.
- The freight-volume figure does not reconcile. The figure given on the call differs from the one in the company's own materials. Both cannot be right, and the deck will carry one.

PROBABILITY OF CLOSE — MODERATE, AND PROCESS-GATED

A genuine second step: he asked for the deck and volunteered his routes. But the decision sits with a membership, not with him.

What would move it to high: a named sponsor and a meeting slot.

WHAT TO DO NEXT

Recommended next steps

01 Settle the freight-volume figure before anything goes to him. One number, from the company.

02 Send the deck he asked for, and ask him to put his follow-up questions in writing.

03 Ask whether he is sponsoring the company into a group meeting, and which slot.

04 Take up the overseas introductions separately, as a distribution route rather than a funding one.

FOR THE NEXT INVESTOR

Suggestions to strengthen the pitch

- Lead with the software, not the book. Attention moved when the conversation reached the agents and the TMS as products sold to others. The operating history is the proof, not the pitch.
- Have the competition answer ready in one slide. The only objection he returned to. What worked was naming the competitors, then naming what they do not have.
- Ask the process question early with member-led groups. Who sponsors, which meeting, what diligence: asked at the start, it tells you what the meeting can actually produce.
